MALTON, comprising OLD and NEW MALTON, in the North Riding, and the parish of NORTON in the East Riding returned one member to Parliament under the provisions of The "Representation of the People Act, 1867," having previously returned two, but under the provisions of the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885," it was disfranchised as a borough, and absorbed into the Thirsk and Mallon division. It is a market and union town, polling place for the Riding, head of a petty sessional division and county court district, and railway station, in Ryedale wapentake, rural deanery of Malton, archdeaconry of Cleveland and diocese of York. Malton is on the west bank of the river Derwent, on which is a stone bridge connecting it with Norton: it is 212¾ miles from London, and from Beverley 31¼ north-west, Bridlington 31¼ west, Darlington 52, Driffield 20 north-west, Filey 24½ west, Harrogate 40¼, Huddersfield 70¼, Hull 39½ north, Knaresborough 38½, Leeds 53¾, Normanton 46¼, Pickering 10¾ south, Scarborough 21, Sheffield 74½, Thirsk 30 east, Whitby 34¾, and York 21¾.

The town, which is about a mile in length, stands on an eminence overlooking the river, which runs through a beautiful and fertile valley. There was formerly a castle here at the foot of the bridge over the river Derwent, the seat of the lords De Vesci, which was destroyed by King Henry II during its existence the town was burned down by Thurston, Archbishop of York, who besieged it for the purpose of dislodging the Scots, and after its rebuilding it was called New Malton: it is lighted with gas, abundantly supplied with water of an excellent quantity, and has a good market-place. Here is a station at the junction of the branches to Thirsk and Driffield with the York and Scarborough branch of the North Eastern railway.

The town is governed by a Local Board of Health of 18 members, formed Oct. 31, 1854, under the Public Health Act of 1848.

The church of St. Mary the Virgin, Old Marton, consists of part of the nave only of the church of the ancient prior founded between the years 1147 and 1153 by Eustace FitzJohn, for canons of the Sempringham or Gilbertine order; "a magnificent remain," according to the late Sir Gilbert Scott, "of one of the noblest periods of mediaeval art." The existing fragment now in use comprises the six western most bays, together with the west front, the south-west tower and part of the north-west tower; the present east end has been formed by inclosing the space between the second pair of piers west of the crossing, and inserting therein three modern lancets, filled with stained glass: the clerestory remaining in 1728 has disappeared, but the triforium still exists, and on this the roof is fixed: the north arcade of the nave is wholly within the church, the first three bays from the east, Transition Norman, having octagonal columns, the fourth is encased with panelled Perpendicular work, and has a cornice bearing an inscription, the two next bays are also Perpendicular, the westernmost arch next the tower being necessarily blocked: the south arcade has been simply blocked, the columns and arches appearing both inside and outside the church; the first four bays from the east have round moulded arches, carried on cylindrical shafts, but the remaining piers on this side are clustered; the triforium displays large circular arches, inclosing smaller pointed ones, but on the north side the three westernmost bays consist of blind paneling; the interior is now lighted from the sides by small plain round-headed windows; the west front, Early English, has an inserted Perpendicular window, and below it a fine recessed Transition Norman doorway; the south-west tower, of three stages, has lofty pointed windows with clustered shafts in the first and second stages, and three sides of the upper stage are pierced by coupled lancets, with two quatrefoils above: the machicolated parapet is perfectly plain, and has been repaired with brick: the tower contains 3 bells: besides the existing church, there remain the easternmost portions of the aisle walls, with a processional door and a piscina on the south side, and on the north side, crossing the aisle, a good Norman doorway, with beak ornament; the western piers of the central tower are also standing, and near these are three large and one small stone coffins: the church was partly restored in 1879, and more thoroughly in 1887 and 1888, at a cost of £4,000, under the direction of Mr. Temple L. Moore, architect, of Downshire hill, Hampstead, when the roof was entirely renewed, and the interior of the church lowered nearly 4 feet, so as to arrive at the original level: the bases of the pillars, which had been concealed since the time of the Dissolution, are once more exposed to view; these on the north side are in a very good state of preservation, but on the south side they had entirely disappeared: the church has 390 sittings: the churchyard extends to the north and west of the church, but is now closed. The Priory church, when complete, consisted of a nave of 8 bays, 142 feet in length, with aisles and western towers, central tower, transepts with square eastern chapels, and a choir with aisles: the cloisters, 102 feet square, adjoined the nave on the south, the refectory extending along the southern alley: a vaulted chamber, formerly below the refectory, now forms part of the abbey house: the site of the priory was granted in 1546 to Robert Holgate, Bishop of Llandaff, who afterwards founded a free Grammar school here. The register dates from the year 1600. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £150, including 60 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Earl of Fitzwilliam K.G. and held since 1874 by the Rev. Edward Augustus Bracken Pitman M.A. of St. John' s College, Cambridge . The tithe, amounting to £920, belongs to Earl Fitzwilliam.

The church of St. Michael is an ancient and remarkable building of stone, chiefly in the Later Norman style, and consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, vestry and a Perpendicular western tower containing 3 bells: the nave and aisles are divided by arcades of four arches: the east end is filled with a triplet of Norman windows, and a round window above these and two side windows in the chancel are all stained: in the south aisle is a memorial window to James Smith esq. of Barton Cottage, d.1867, and the west window, erected in 1883, is a memorial to James Russell and Mary his wife: the clerestory windows are emblazoned with the arms of Eure, Alton, Tyson, Fitzwilliam and those of the diocese: the brass eagle lectern was presented in memory of John Smith, d. Aug. 13, 1870, and Mary his wife: the clerestory windows are enriched on the exterior with zigzag ornament, and there is a string course of the same: the church was restored in the year 1885, by subscription, at a cost of £1,600, but the total cost of the restoration has been about £5,000: there are 525 sittings . The registers, of which there are 13 volumes, date from the year 1571. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £195, with residence, in the gift of the Earl Fitzwilliam, and held since 1855 by the Rev. George Arthur Firth M .A. of Christ Church, Oxford, and surrogate.

The church of St . Leonard is a building of stone, principally in the Norman style, with inserted windows of Perpendicular date, and consists of chancel and nave under one roof, aisles, vestry, south porch and an embattled western tower with slated octagonal spire containing 8 bells, hung on the 5th December, 1768, and restored in 1868: there is an arcade of three Norman arches between the nave and north aisle and of two arches between the chancel and its north aisle ; the font is also Norman: in the sacarium are two beautiful carved chairs and over the west window of the tower is a rude figure in a square niche: there are 350 sittings. The register dates from the year 1600. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value from tithe rent-charge £174, with residence, in the gift of the Earl Fitzwilliam, and held since 1863 by the Rev . Robert William Elliot M.A.of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge.

Ebenezer Congregational chapel, Saville street, built in 1823, has a stone front relieved by four pilasters of the Ionic order supporting a pediment: it has 500 sittings. The Wesleyan chapel, Saville street, erected in 1811, is a plain structure of brick, with two pillars at the entrance supporting a cornice: there are sittings for 400 persons. The Wesleyan chapel, Old Malton, is a plain building of brick, erected in 1824, and will seat 100 persons. The Primitive Methodist chapel, Old Malton, is a structure of brick, with stone dressings, in a plain style, and has 120 sittings.

In the town is a Catholic chapel, dedicated to St. Mary; also Congregational, Baptist, Unitarian, Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels and meeting houses for the Society of Friends and Plymouth Brethren.

Old Malton Cemetery, of about half an acre, was formed in 1883, the site being given by the trustees of Hemsworth hospital; it is under the control of a Burial Board of three members.

New Malton Cemetery, was opened in 1859 and comprises about 5 acres; the grounds are tastefully laid out and there are two mortuary chapels; it is under the control of a Burial Board of eighteen members.

Old Malton Grammar school was founded in 1547 and is endowed; the building is of stone in the Early English style and has a clock turret containing one bell.

The Town Hall, situated on the east side of the market place, is a plain edifice of stone, erected at different periods, and is partly embattled; the entrance, which projects from the main building and is carried up to the roof, has a balcony, supported on brackets; on the roof is an open lantern. The Corn Exchange, situated in Yorkersgate and erected in 1845, is a stone building, the front of which is relieved by four pilasters of the Corinthian order, upholding a cornice and pediment.

The East Riding Bank, Yorkersgate, is a good two-storied building of stone in the Italian style; and there are two other banks and a savings bank.

The principal hotel is the Talbot, which is excellently appointed and has a pleasant garden, with lawns, overlooking the river.

In the neighbourhood are large lime quarries and whinstone quarries. There are iron and brass foundries, agricultural implement works, three breweries, maltings and corn mills.

The Malton Agricultural Society, founded in 1872 and now numbering about 200 members, hold their annual show here in the month of July; and a flower show is held here annually about August.

The Malton Field Naturalists' Society was established in 1880, for the study of botany, geology and other natural sciences; meetings are held in the literary Institute on the 3rd Monday in each month.

The market day is Saturday; there is also a market for the sale of cattle every other Tuesday in each month; and there are fairs yearly – for week before Palm Sunday, on Saturday before Whitsuntide, and on the 11th and 12th October, and Saturday before November 23rd.

The Malton Literary Institute and Subscription Rooms, Yorkersgate, erected in 1814, is a building of white brick with stone dressings, and contains a bijou theatre, a museum of natural history and curiosities, reading-room and a library of over 2,500 volumes, with residence for the librarian.

The Masonic Hall is in the basement of the Literary Institute.

A Company of the 2nd Volunteer Battalion of the Princess of Wales's Own Yorkshire Regiment, numbering about 60, is stationed here.

At the top of Yorkersgate stands a cannon, on the carriage of which is the following inscription, "Captured at Sebastopol by the allied armies, 1855." In 1883 it was surrounded with ornamental railings and planted about with evergreens and shrubs.

Malton was an important Roman station and has been claimed as the Roman "Derventio;" coins and other remains have been discovered. A castle was erected here, on the site of the Roman "Castrum," in the time of William the Norman, which subsequently belonged to the family of de Vesci, but was afterwards destroyed and a mansion built on the spot by Ralph, 3rd Baron Eure, in the reign of James I. In 1674 this house was pulled down. Traces of the south and east sides of the roman intrenchments may be seen to the south of the lodge and, in the centre of these, indications of the foundations of the castle.

The Lodge, the residence of the Hon. William Henry Wentworth-Fitzwilliam M.P., D.L. is an ancient stone building, the remaining portion of a large mansion, originally erected on the site of a Roman encampment, by William, Baron Eure, in the early part of the sixteenth century, but shortly afterwards demolished on account of a family dispute; the existing structure appears to be Jacobean and has modern embattled wings and angle turrets, finished with ogee-shaped capping; the house contains a quantity of oak panelling, and in an upper room there is a remarkable piece of carving illustrating the history of Jonah; there are also some cabinets and a bedstead of early date; the wall inclosing the front courtyard, next the road, is lofty and has three large gateways, much dilapidated; to the east are three ivy-covered houses of two stories, with stepped gabled dormers, one of which is the estate office.

The Earl Fitzwilliam K.G. is lord of the manor and principal land owner.

The acreage of New and Old Malton is 3,639; the population in 1881 was, New Malton, 3,453; Old Malton, 1,819; rateable value, New Malton, £7,537; Old Malton, £10,931.

Norton is a suburb, on the east bank of the Derwent, in the East Riding, connected with New Malton by a bridge of three arches. (Full particulars and list of residents in this suburb will be found in Kelly's Directory of the East Riding.)
